Definitions

Call-In: Contacting an employee during off-duty hours and requiring the employee to immediately report to work, other than continuously into their regular shift. It is not considered a call-in if the employee has prior notice of the need to work. Volunteering for unexpected overtime opportunities may be a call-in. However, planned overtime related to a worker’s workload does not constitute “call-in”.

Standby: A requirement that an employee, during off-duty hours, be reachable by phone or “pager” within one hour of being called, and report for duty where needed within one hour of being reached, or normal commuting time between the employee’s home of record and duty station or other work location, whichever is greater. “Standby” duty is paid at one-fifth the regular hourly rate for each hour of such duty (rounded to the nearest whole cent).

Policy

District Office Responsibilities

If Family Services workers anticipate a significant development on an open case or suspect there may be a need for a specific service after hours, key information and/or special instructions will be documented in case notes, or CIES should be informed by phone or email. District office staff will always notify CIES when workers are involved in child safety responses that extend beyond business hours. This may include a new child safety intervention (CSI), an emergency care order (ECO) or pick-up order, an escalated situation with a youth or family, or other situations that require division involvement.

The Non-Management Contract of the Collective Bargaining Agreements requires staff to be on standby as needed by the division.

District offices should first consider employees who volunteer for standby and allow staff to opt-in to the local standby pool. Supervisors or district directors will approve volunteers for standby based on overall job performance. Qualified district office staff are required to be on standby to respond to urgent after hours reports of child abuse and neglect and other case situations that warrant immediate attention. To be on standby, workers must be employed by the division for at least six months and no longer on original probationary status.

Prior to being on standby for the first time, supervisors or district directors will provide an orientation to standby for new workers. Additionally, workers will shadow a more experienced worker at least twice during a standby shift when a call-in occurs. Staff may request additional shadowing experience as needed to support their learning. Following a standby shift where shadowing has occurred, a debrief will occur with the supervisor and two workers.

The division’s standby hours are:

If called in, workers shall arrive at the destination as soon as possible, but within two hours of the page or call.

Staff who are called in should have a standby resource binder with them while they are in the field. The binder should include the following documents and information:

- A custody packet containing the paperwork needed to be completed when a child comes into custody
  - Application for foster parents
  - Placement checklist
  - Foster parent authorization letter

CIES After Hours Responsibilities

CIES is responsible for documenting and responding to concerns received through the Child Protection Line (1-800-649-5285) after hours. CIES staff will gather as much information as possible about a situation from the reporter and law enforcement, as needed. CIES staff will review recent case notes and case note alerts for key information, instructions that may have been documented, and information about dangerous or potentially dangerous situations.

When a situation requires a worker’s response after hours, CIES will contact the worker on standby or availability in the district office. There may be situations when inter-district collaboration is required due to weather, other travel constraints, the location or placement of the child, or other case-specific circumstances. In these instances, CIES may contact the appropriate district for after hours assistance. CIES reserves the right to call any standby worker from any district office at any time.

If CIES cannot reach a worker and has left a message, CIES may call the district director if the employee is not reachable. The district director will partner with CIES to ensure there is coverage.

CIES staff will provide guidance to workers called in after hours. CIES staff will document after hours activities in case notes or in an intake and inform the worker assigned to the case.

After Hours Response Guidelines

While the division has after hours coverage in place, the support and information available after hours is not the same as regular business hours. After hours responses require a different level of safety planning.

In any situation that requires a response after hours and the response requires contact with an individual who may pose danger, the first point of contact will be to law enforcement for the purpose of either joint investigation or assistance. The division will be more cautious after hours and assume danger if information about the family or situation is unknown. In these situations, workers will only be called in after hours if law enforcement accompanies them.

In situations regarding youth transports or situations where a child or youth require contact with workers after hours (e.g., accompanying or supervising a child at a hospital or police station), CIES will gather as much information about the child as possible and share this information with the worker. If limited information is known about a youth entering care because of their own behavior or delinquent acts, possible risks and the safety of staff will be considered when deciding how the youth will be transported.

CIES will collaborate with workers to determine if a teamed response is needed and call-in another worker if warranted. Family Services workers should contact the CIES supervisor if they do not feel safe with a situation where they are being called in and would like additional resources (a teamed response) to respond.

Family Services workers should speak with the CIES supervisor if they require supervisory guidance to carry out the tasks being asked of them. If there is a district-level communication protocol in place, workers may also contact their own supervisor or their district director. Instances of disagreement about a call-in should be resolved through a phone call with involved district staff and CIES.

Staff shall always inform CIES of their activities and resolutions of the call-in.

If workers are called in after midnight and feel they are unable to report to work by 7:45 AM, a message should be left for their supervisor informing them of when they will arrive at work, coverage needs, and any changes that will need to be made to the planned schedule.

Standby and Call-In Time Report Coding

Division staff may code up to 24 hours in each day – 8 hours for time worked and 16 hours for time on standby. Standby shifts are 16 hours Monday-Friday and 24 hours on weekends and holidays. Standby shifts do not carry over to the next day.

District offices may choose to split up standby shifts based on the circumstances, preferences, and agreements within the office. If staff split the standby shift, they must document the time on and time off and indicate the name of the employee who shared the standby shift in the comment area.

Division staff are not permitted to work overtime and then be on standby. The workday must end (8 hours worked) before an employee can be on standby.

The division does not perform “on call” duties and therefore the “on call” time reporting code shall not be used.
The division shall use the following standby and call-in codes, as applicable:

- STBCO – Standby (hours comp .20)
- STBP2 – Standby (hours paid .20)
- CALLC – Call-In (hours comp)
- CALLP – Call-In (hours paid)
- WRKOT – Hours worked over schedule (called in and required to work continuously into or after the workday OR telephone work)

Call-in is typically activated by a CIES supervisor. Call-in occurs for a minimum of four hours. At times, district directors or supervisors may call-in a worker to respond to an emergency. When an employee is called in and required to work, this shall not be a continuation of their normally scheduled shift or work duties assigned as part of their caseload.

In instances where an employee is required to work continuously into or after their normally scheduled shift, the employee shall receive compensation at applicable overtime rates for all hours worked (using code WRKOT).
